Jack Black, Kyle Glass. Violence. Trump and two people stream Outer Wilds. Neil Gaiman.

I was watching two individuals stream a game. A phenomenal game that I truly love and somehow these two individuals talked as streaming usually does about people and things that they can no longer enjoy simply because of their creators.

Whenever I ask for the evidence that Gina Carano was transphobic and that the reasons that she was fired for that well the tweets and everything is just the boot pronouns and that's it. However she kept her job for some time after that. It was the Tweet about the Holocaust and how people were set against each other and propaganda set each other apart. Accusation of Nazi bigot transfer all circulated simply for retweeting not because she said anything but only sharing an Instagram post about how people were set apart during the Holocaust and told to hate each other. If the beep boop pronoun thing was the thing well nobody seemed to remember her tweets about her support for Trans people and how she clarified that on her own Twitter. Nevertheless the supposed fascist nazi is employed by a Jewish individual. And that someone for an entirely in offensive speech has been canceled and stopped from success and the ability to make money through their talents. Saying that oh she's fine now despite being having a much lesser salary than working for one of the largest corporations. And people said that was fine.

Gina Carano might be insane she certainly accused as such but she was canceled from her job certainly not for any bigotry. But alas that's what people have stuck out in their minds. They called her Nazi bigot this that and the other thing despite being hired by someone who's Jewish.

Yeah it's what it is it's what it is.

Fast forward to the Trump assassination attempt. We have Tenacious D going on concert. Jack Black's best friend, Kyle Glass, celebrating a birthday. Kyle Glass, for his birthday wish, said "Next time, don't miss."This joke was funny or in bad taste depending who you ask but Jack Black was laughing.

Within a week of this Tenacious D canceled the concert and Jack Black came out with a statement. Joe Biden rightly said that the assassination attempt was against everything America stands for as a nation.

The two people I was watching. We're commenting on this and their point of view was that Jack Black was throwing their best friend under the bus. That although Jack Black has been, in their words, left leaning, and thought that his actions on stage with the joke did not match his actions that happened later and that he was throwing someone under the bus.

I don't know why these two individuals made the left-leaning comment and I think their criticism of Jack Black's suspected hypocrisy are quite valid.

That the higher-ups told Jack Black what to do and the like. That may be a little bit more dubious or unproven but this would not be surprising given how they lay the information out and I fear that this is valid.

What wasn't valid is that somehow they had Chagrin at so-called right Wingers being upset with violence and their counterexample was that of people in Gaza dying chiefly Palestinians. At that point I had to look away.

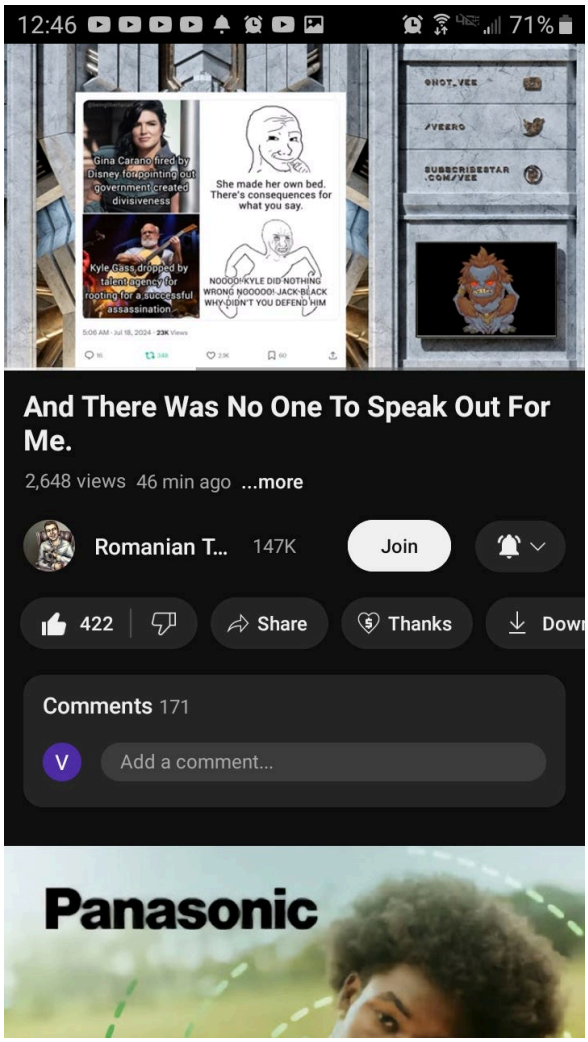
What happened was a violent Act. Something disgusting. One could easily point out the right hypocrisy by citing the January 6th incident or any other time of right wing violence be it radical or not. And not to mention massively. But what I find very terrible is that we're seeing this kind of strange justification of violence and also lack of knowledge of how Hamas, a terrorist group, started the October 7th attacks. Are we really to say that Israel has no right to retaliate? Well I'm pretty sure they're not saying that of course as real as a right to retaliate however Israel is also doing some really crappy things that are arguably hypocritical.

Arguably hypocritical because it is Netanyahu said the same thing that Hamas wanted but with more polite language and with more subtlety.

But I noticed on Twitter and a lot of a certain politics that there's no shortage of romanticizing people who behead civilians and children as being Freedom Fighters while Israel is seen as a Nazi state. Look anywhere you like on Twitter. Just start a hashtag with Israel and it will auto complete to some of the most vitriolic nonsense.

Instead of nuance and acknowledging that both sides are absolutely animalistic to each other and that there's problem with public policy in both that one is a state that is backed by the United States and engaging in the same sins that we admonish Palestine for while the other side is an extremist fascist religious sect that is oppressive and wishes for the extermination of an entire people through religious fervor because of islamo fascism.

Why is it Gaza and Palestine where they went to in all of this?



And why do they seem so surprised? I had to turn away because it seems that they were somehow trivializing violence not once but twice.

Trump is odious and he has become an absolute villain in the eyes of anyone who falls in media to the point where the Russiagate conspiracy was peddled for 3 years. That somehow Trump was allies with Putin despite rebuking him that Trump's efforts with the Abraham Accord and to pull out of Afghanistan are just totally ignored. That Joe Biden totally royally screwed up. Trump is indeed very odious he was the one who took lobbyist money from train companies to shoot down the law that would require trains to have had better brakes.

Trump baned bump stocks and blamed video games for violence. For all of his things he was taken out by hook and crook by the American vote.

I would met I would love a romantic story where a despot comes to harm buying a pressed people. But I'm really not liking the kind of partisanship and the violence that this is caused where Trump is evil all right Wingers are evil all X are evil.

Because it's really not the case. And it's so partisan that we're having people live in alternate realities.

For some reason they went on and on and continue talking a bit and they mentioned Neil Gaiman his accusations and how they can't read his stories anymore. This I'll have to look at the accusations but with all his work with feminism and Tori Amos I'm going to find it very hard to believe or maybe it's because I don't want to see someone who was a very good artist suddenly having skeletons in their closet no matter what political leanings.

Canceling was also incredibly prevalent in the comics industry and the drama there that didn't need to be. Not to mention this same kind of cultural Zeitgeist and questions of taste that objected to how things were done.

Oddly enough done by those of the same politics. And many YouTubers and many people who play video games were complaining about ideological pushes. Ideological pushes that were told aren't happening and then when they were happening and no longer deniable are totally okay. That someone if they don't like the last of us two or something then they're bad.

Now why do I bring this up? Because somehow talking about The Last Of Ys 2 just fell out of their mouths of the two people that were playing the game.

I'm not sure if it was because director Neil druckman of that game was a progressive darling that was desexualizing and going on about how games need to change to be mature when he made a bunch of slop that people didn't like. And then people accuse those who didn't like it as being ideological bigots or Nazis and anti-diversity. Or maybe they mentioned it because Neil druckmann was turned from a baby face into a heel for saying that the conflict in the game was a representation of Israel Palestine conflict and he stood with Israel. Which seems to make him a colonizer or complicit with genocide.

Yeah when we have armed guards at Chow halls in Ivy League schools and blatantly openly anti-semitic chance of gas the Jews in Australia. To the point where Jewish students are attacked and told to be less conspicuous by college administrators there's something very very wrong.

Who are the Nazis again?

Why are people upset with one instance of canceling but okay with the other?

Possibly because Jack Black made a choice then again a coerce choice is no choice at all and maybe that these two people are right. But I'm sure that with their identities and how they think of things they wouldn't have much to complain about Gina Carano being canceled and say it was possibly Justified.

That or maybe that's my prejudgment coming through. But this little snippet of what the hell's going on I hope it studied by historians in some what and how it's actually manifested. And I hope we look upon this history of political correctness identity politics and all the like as a dark chapter of totalitarianism. Social justice woke whatever you call it it's just a bit insane and that was the initial action that caused a much larger reaction. That people didn't want to be judged as sickness as violent School shooters or sexist misogynist Nazis if they so much this enjoyed a certain video game or humor that was totally acceptable at the start of the century and for 15 years after. In fact we were mocking these efforts very closely with diversity roles having a proud black woman of color to play Hitler so we can have more diversity masturbation for the white people that think they're doing good by marginalized communities.

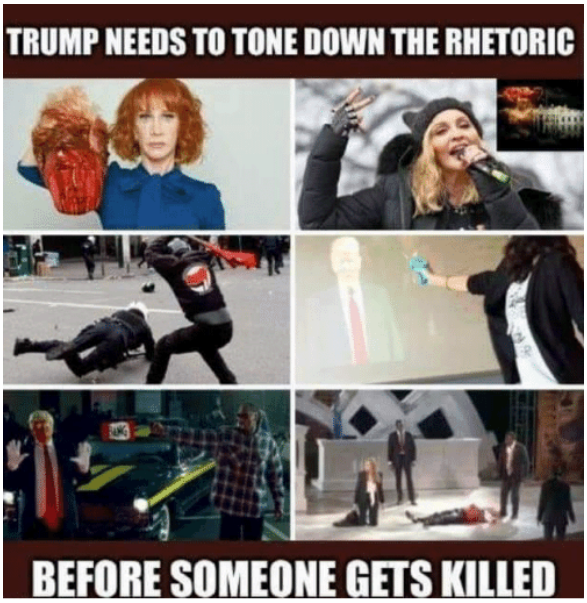
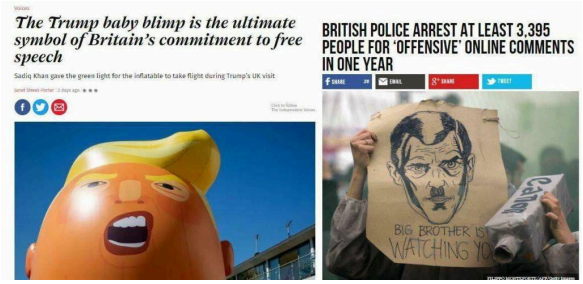
With all the identity politics with all the Insanity of the industry and controls to change music games TV and movies to be more Progressive in these values to the point of making women more modest to make things less offensive to Saudi Arabia and China and to promote diversity whatever that means I'm a little bit sick of this kind of blind morality.



Hypocrisy



It can't be that difficult to understand. Of course progress is great I'm glad people are more free with their sexuality more than ever but I guess that wasn't counterculture enough and so people have to go further. To the point of censorship to the point of judgment to the point of Bowdlerizing… being uncritically accepting of every new thing that came down the pipeline to the point where anti-Semitism is normalized.

We're journalists at the start of 2009 and most especially 2012 kept talking more and more about race identity politics privilege and all these very foreign Concepts to the point where even the definition of racism is changed to suit some ideology.

Anybody who objects or points out any of the things that are happening is instantly labeled a bigot and then ostracized and with cheers. And now that the other side is being chomped up by the monster that they fed they cry foul.

So yes it really does come back to the so-called culture war that somehow we're told that doesn't exist. And then if it exists it's of no consequence.

And then what it is of consequence then it must be good or bad depending on what day it is or who's canceled or not. Because it's not just conservatives being canceled not by a long shot. But the very people that said that there are no bad tactics only bad targets are now screaming scared that there's now consequences for them. And not even very strong consequences at that.

"Speech has consequences"

I wanted to say a lot I wanted to say a lot to these two. These are normally very good well-adjusted people who are absolute sweethearts but there's some very strange things going on in their mind and I think that's what a lot of this crap is.

Maybe we as people are very easily manipulated.

I cannot properly organize my thoughts and maybe I'm far worse than they ever were but I really do tie this back to a consumer revolt and people that try to slam the Overton window on the fingers of society and everyone and sadly they succeeded.

That we truly do want villains we truly do want these stories so we can feel that we make sense of the world but the truth is so much more complicated
But what isn't complicated is that something is deeply wrong and not in the way most people think.

As someone who is a former SJW I've realized sjwism & feminism hasn't empowered me, enriched me, or been productive in my life. It's made me hate or at least dislike people for no reason other than their skin color or gender, it's made me see the negative in everything, its made me feel oppressed when I'm not because its a self fulfilling procephy. It's made me watch everything I say and do in fear of offended someone. It's frankly made me miserable. I want none of it anymore.

I think white SJWs (who account for like 90% of twitter SJWs are racist AF and hijack real issues minorities struggle with for their own social media points.
I've argued for years that well off/rich white liberal leftists are the real racists.

SOMEBODY MADE A FALSE ACCUSATION AGAINST MY SON AND THEN AN ANGRY MOB CONTACTED MY EMPLOYER AND GOT ME FIRED SO NOW I CAN'T FEED MY FAMILY and yes, there's no shortage of stupidity on the other side either.

Suddenly feminists are not complaining of women being excluded in that submarine voyage to the Titanic
